

General & Emergency Surgery

Alongside breast surgery, Dr Broeze is a fully qualified specialist general surgeon, experienced in laparoscopic abdominal surgery, trauma and emergency care.

What it involves

This includes gallbladder removal, appendicectomy, hernia repair, removal of skin and soft-tissue lumps, and the management of acute abdominal emergencies and trauma.

When it is recommended

Sudden severe abdominal pain, a painful hernia, gallstone attacks or an injury need prompt surgical assessment.

Our approach

Dr Broeze regularly operates alongside her colleague Dr Pieter Marais, bringing a team approach and keyhole techniques to general surgical cases wherever they are suitable.

In more detail

Laparoscopic (keyhole) surgery means smaller wounds, less pain and a quicker return to normal life for most abdominal operations.

The practice provides a written quotation with the procedure codes; you submit it to your medical aid to obtain pre-authorisation before the operation.

Recovery

Most keyhole operations are a day case or one-night stay, with return to desk work in about a week.

Common questions

Do you only treat women?

No. Dr Broeze treats men and women for general surgical conditions, and also treats men with breast conditions.
